A close-up photograph of a bartender's hands. The left hand holds a copper cocktail shaker, tilted to pour a vibrant yellow liquid. The right hand holds a fine-mesh metal strainer, catching any solids as the liquid falls into a clear martini glass. The glass is garnished with a delicate, curled slice of lemon. The background is dark with soft, out-of-focus bokeh lights in warm tones.

Tom Dyer has been involved in almost every major flair competition in the world for the past 15 years and is also renowned for his professional bartending skills, having learned early in his career that it is important to bartend first and flair second. Tom has trained bartenders all over the world, working with the likes of Diageo and Red Bull, opening bars and performing shows, or simply coming up with new cocktails on his travels.

Twelve times UK champion, multiple world champion and twice Guinness World Record Holder, Tom decided it was time to quit competing in flair and focus on improving training standards in flair bartending and competitions through the World Flair Association and EBS.

A close-up, high-contrast photograph of a mechanical assembly, likely a watch movement. The central focus is a vertical shaft with several cylindrical components, possibly gears or bearings, stacked on it. The shaft is flanked by two large, curved metal plates that form a frame or support structure. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the metallic surfaces and creating deep shadows. The overall aesthetic is industrial and precise.
